LIFE SAVED BY INHALATOR SQUAD

LARGER STOP SIGN PROMISED AT DEATH COR.

The Editor of the News-Bulletin is in receipt of the following letter from Matthew C. Sielski, safety and traffic Engineering Department of the Chicago Motor Club regarding better safety protection at the junction of Wolf Road and 159th street:

Dear Mr. Semmler:

Several weeks ago you brought to our attention the intersection of 159th Street and Wolf Road, just north of your city. In our correspondence with you we stated that action has been taken with the State Highway Department to have a four-way stop erected.

We have just received a letter from the state Highway Dept. stating that a very thorough investigation was made and it was found that signals at this intersection are not warranted at this time. However, the State is of the opinion that the existing 24 in. stop signs on Wolf Road be replaced with 36 inch stop signs. It is their opinion that after the larger type sign is in effect accidents at this intersection will be reduced.

The accident records will also be watched and if the type of control recommended does not eliminate angle type collisions then four-way stop signs will be erected.

Thank you again for bringing this matter to our attention.

Very truly yours,
Chicago Motor Club

To Try For Second League Victory

The Orland Park Baseball team will try for their second league victory Sunday when they play host to the strong Chicago Heights team.

Orland won their first victory Sunday when Emil Bornet, Orland's Star Twirler set Beverly Hill's down with 4 scattered singles. This victory leaves Orland with a .500 average.

The Orland team seems to have found themselves now, and Sunday's game with the Heights should prove to be a very tough game. The Heights are a new team in the league and have proved to be very tough competition to the other teams in the league so far. The game will get under way at 2:30 p.m. So why not come out and watch Orland try for another league victory.

Orland To Pave With Gas Tax

The question of building streets that will last has been a problem the village board of Orland Park has been considering for sometime and they finally decided to pave Union street from 143rd street south by the Wabash depot to Middle street, the cost to be met by the gas tax funds due the village from the state. Monday night of this week the contract for this piece of paving was awarded to Davidson & Doctor, Orland contractors for the sum of $4,700.80. The proposition now is awaiting the approval of the state highway department.

This Democrat Has Real Sense

The past week has been one of added wild war talk and hysteria as Italy jumped into the war frying pan and other small countries are on the verge of doing likewise. The Democrats are divided over the attitude of our government officials on the war question as was evidenced the other day when Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat of Montana warned the American people to wake up and serve notice that, "If it becomes necessary to break with the Democratic party, I shall break with it if it is going to be a war party." He said he would not support "any candidate for President of the United States who is trying to get us into this war."

Here is a Democrat with sense. Many of the Democratic officials are war mongering.

Propaganda is being spread far and wide that if we don't jump into the fray the Nazi's will come here. This is the bunk. The same talk prevailed in the first World war, when it was said that if America did not go over and lick the kaiser he would come over here. The propaganda worked, and we made a bunch of saps of ourselves for swallowing this propaganda. All we got out of it was a national depression, loss of thousands of precious lives and hospitals filled with wounded.

Everyone who is anxious to look out for the interests of foreign nations should hurry up and get over there. We should think of America first. Defend America, make our nation safe for democracy. Down every traitor and borer from within whether he be government official or working man. We must be united for America and for America only.

Past promises of the Democratic party are to be taken with a grain of salt. Remember the promises made in Wilson's time "He kept us out of war" and as soon as he was inaugurated we were in the war? What assurances have we that Roosevelt won't be in the same position if he should be re-elected?

What good would it do us if we declared war right now? We are not prepared for modern warfare and all we would get out of it would be untold sorrow, suffering and a worse depression than the one we have just come through. Let us use our heads sanely and calmly and just THINK this matter through instead of getting hysterical over it.

Fine Floral Display At Mokena Garden Show

The Mokena Garden Club sponsored a very fine flower show which was held in the public school auditorium Wednesday afternoon and evening. This was the finest flower show and the most largely attended one that they have sponsored.

Mrs. Herman Schweser was the chairman and Mrs. Arthur Shoop, program chairman.

The flower displays were large, beautiful and many and this holds in displays that were not of flowers. Next week we shall publish the prize winners.

The stage was cleverly and beautifully set in a scene depicting a child's play yard with all that went with it.

In the evening a contest was held to choose a Queen of the flower show. The candidates for same being limited to girls from two to eight years. Every contestant wore a wreath of fresh flowers on her head and carried flowers in bouquets or otherwise. The age of the contestants and their costumes with the beautiful background of the stage presented a most beautiful picture. Judy Howes 2½ years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Howes was chosen queen. Her attendants were Ruth Ann Stanger, Mary Ann Rinke, Ursula Theil and Carol Benson. The others entered in the show were: Helen Geuther, Dolores Cooper, Marlene Schaeffer and Audrey Neithammer. It was very hard for the judges, Mrs. Oliver Schaeffer and Mrs. R. J. Schlacks, of Mokena to make their choice as each contestant was equally as charming.

The following girls from the Primary Room were presented in a ballet dance: Margaret Jean Stermer, Donna Bennett, Marcia Larsen, nta Geuther, Joan Marti, Dorothy Kohl, Ursula Theil, Carol Benson, and Elaine Spiess. They danced to Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" played on the piano by Catherine Reid.

Mokena Postmistress Advocates Better Pay For Small Offices

A bill which would benefit five postmasters in fourth-class postoffices of Will Co., is being sponsored by her associate in Congress, Miss Margaret Maue, postmaster at Mokena who is county director of the National Association of Postmasters announced the past week.

The fourth-class Postmasters in Will County who would be benefited by the measure are: Ray Hubert, Channahon, La Verne Alridge, Custer Park, Blanche Lineberger, Elwood, Fred Kregel, Goodenow and Mary Blatt, Symerton.

If the legislation now before Congress, passed during the present session it will increase the salaries of the postmasters according to the stamps cancelled in their offices would be eliminated and the pay based upon the receipts of the office. Such is the practice in postoffices with higher rating, Miss Maue explained.

There are 29,514 postmasters of fourth-class offices throught the United States, Miss Maue explained. Offices of this class are sometimes referred to as "corner grocery store" postoffices.

While the proposed legislation would slightly increase the amount paid to such postmasters, 5,000 of whom receive less than $150 a year for their services, the bill is looked upon as one to simplify the method of accounting rather than a measure to increase salaries.

Postmasters of fourth-class offices have been urging congress to consider such a bill for the last 50 years, Miss Maue said.

To Observe German Day

The German Day celebration which has been held in the Frankfort annually for the past five years has been a subject of much discussion the past few weeks. Due to the war situation and the leaning of this country toward the allied side, it has been hinted that the affair may run into difficulty. Otto Ehtor of Joliet, President of the German Day group, says emphatically that there will be no speeches of any kind, no uniforms and in fact there will not be a thing on the program which could give rise to any suspicion that the group in question harbored any subversive ideas. Mr. Ehtor states that the members of the organization are 100 per cent Americans and that the observance of German Day will mean no more than the observance of Swedish Day which was observed at the Frankfort Grove last Sunday.

German Day will be observed on Sunday, July 27th. The program calls for band concerts, singing, all kinds of games, eats and drinks. In the evening there will be a torch light parade for the little folks and dancing will be the general order, with Harry Hohenshell's orchestra playing.

New Lenox Youth Overcome by Illuminating Gas

Robert Drake, aged 19 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Drake of New Lenox had a narrow escape from being asphyxiated in his own home Sunday evening. His parents were away from home when he came home. He placed a kettle of water on the gas stove and after lighting the burner he began reading a newspaper. The kettle boiled over, extinguishing the flame, but the gas continued to escape from the open gas jet. Robert soon was overcome by the gas. He was found unconscious by his parents when they returned home about 11:00 o'clock.

The pulmotor squad of the Joliet fire department was summoned and after working over the young man for awhile they revived him. He was taken to the office of Dr. Janet Holt in New Lenox who ordered him taken to the Silver Cross hospital. After a short stay there he returned home and is none the worse for his close call.

A Winner

The New Lenox Soft Ball Team is really going to town. Last Wednesday they played the Morris Paper Mill team defeating them 7 to 6. This was a League game. Last Friday New Lenox traveled to Bradley and defeated them 17 to 4. Sunday they played Naperville at New Lenox and won 10 to 5. Tuesday night they played the Joliet Rivals but the game was rained out in the third inning with the Rivals leading 5 to 0.

Coming games are scheduled as follows: Sunday night, Maywood Dodgers at New Lenox; Thursday, June 20th Litsinger Motors of Chicago; Friday, June 21 Coal City at New Lenox.

Plans Made For Old Time Picnic

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY OR FOR GUESTS
(See Recipes Below)

It takes little imagination to evolve a good meal in summer. Whether you are planning a menu for the family or for guests, there's all the wealth of the world from which to choose!

There is fresh asparagus and home-grown berries, new potatoes, tiny green onions, and all the other tender green things from the garden.

Remember that sunshine and warm weather and foods with zestful flavor go together, and plan your menus around fresh-tasting fruits and vegetables, for they have winning ways with jaded appetites. There's the minted pineapple cup pictured above, that's a grand first course for a summer lunch or dinner; it's as refreshing as a cool breeze off the lake! There are fruit salads, too—cool and colorful as summer gardens; and vegetable plates, which, well arranged, have appetite-appeal galore. And, by the way, your calorie-conscious friends will bless you if you serve them, when you entertain the club, these refreshing, filling, but not too fattening combinations.

Plan your menus around some of the fresh and tempting recipes below, and when you serve a salad or vegetable for the main dish of the meal, serve with it some unusual bread, a beverage, and the simplest kind of dessert.

You'll find tested recipes for unusual bread and rolls to serve with summer meals, in my cook book, "Better Baking."

HAGGAI URGES THE BUILDING OF GOD'S HOUSE

LESSON TEXT—Haggai 1:2-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is.—Hebrews 10:24, 25.

Religious work—or, more correctly stated, Christian work—is a difficult and discouraging task, except for the grace and blessing of God. Not only does the Christian worker have to struggle against that arch-enemy of God and of the souls of men, Satan himself, but he must overcome the deadly indifference and carelessness of men both outside and inside the Church. Then, as if that were not enough, he finds another enemy, the discouragement of his own heart.

Haggai ministered to the Jews who had returned from captivity and who had begun to rebuild the temple. Opposition had developed before they had made more than a beginning, and they at once gave up and turned their interest to their own affairs and the building of their own homes. God was displeased by this sinfulness on their part, and brought judgment upon them through a prolonged drought. Haggai was called to awaken their conscience and to encourage them to action.

I. Consider Your Ways (vv. 2-6, 9-11).

It was not necessary for the prophet to work up any eloquent plea to stir the conscience of the people. He had only to point to their own ways. They were thus faced with three reproving facts.

1. Indifference (v. 2). They were negligent and indifferent, saying the time had not come to build. The same kind of folk today are very sure that the congregation simply cannot afford to keep up preaching services, or heat and light the church for Sunday School.

2. Selfishness (v. 4). They built for themselves ceiled houses and lived in luxury, while God's house lay waste. One is reminded of our own communities, which have money for every conceivable comfort and convenience, but only a few niggardly pennies for God's work.

3. Loss (vv. 6, 9-11). Being stingy toward God is a losing business. He has only to withhold His blessing and we will find ourselves destitute. That is true in the physical realm and is even more true in the spiritual life. Withholding from God will always result in loss (see Prov. 11:24).

II. "Build the House" (v. 8).

God's work is constructive. He may have to destroy and tear down, but He only takes away the old and undesirable that the new and worthy may be built. Three words stand out here.

1. "Go." The Lord wants His people to get into action. Haggai was interested in getting things going. Let us follow his example.

2. "Bring." We are not to come to the Lord's service empty handed. Only as He blesses do we have anything to bring, but often we fail to bring even that which He has supplied.

3. "Build." God's work is committed to us. We are to be His builders.

III. "The People Obeyed" (v. 12).

"Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams" (1 Sam. 15:22). God is looking for obedient people, and is ready to bless and use them. The response to Haggai's message came from

1. The Governor. One wonders what progress America would make back to God if its rulers were to lead us in obedience to His commands and in seeking His face in repentance and prayer. Thank God for every truly spiritually minded national leader, and pray that others may yield themselves to the control of the Lord. Then came

2. The High Priest. All too often religious leaders have actually hindered the work of God—and what a hindrance they can be! We read that in Haggai's time the high priest obeyed. Christian leaders, are we too going before our people in unquestioning obedience to God? If not, why should we not begin now? With such leadership, we are not surprised to hear that

3. The People Also Obeyed and Feared God. Many capable Christian workers believe that the youth of America of our day, far from being worse than their fathers, are actually seeking for real spiritual leadership.

False Christs Shall Rise

And then, if any man shall say to you, Lo, here is Christ; or lo, he is there, believe him not. For false Christs, and false prophets shall rise, and shall shew signs and wonders, to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect.—Mark 13: 21, 22.

Speaking the Truth

I had rather suffer for speaking the truth, than that the truth should suffer for the want of my speaking.

Operation for Sinus Trouble May Be Futile

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

A FEW years ago there were many operations for sinus trouble—the little hollows or caverns adjoining the nose. These sinuses are called the sounding box of the voice. Thus when a head cold is present and these little sinuses get filled with mucus, the voice sounds flat and "ing" sounds like "ick."

When these head colds became very common and the mucus and sometimes pus was too thick to drain out, the enlarging of the opening was frequently done by nose surgeons to enable this mucus and pus to drain out. The enlarged opening also helped to "ventilate" the sinus, thus keeping its lining of mucus membrane in a more healthy condition.

Unfortunately, these openings from the sinus into the nose are not placed in the best position for drainage when we are standing or sitting, but as Dr. Louis M. Pearlman states in Hygeia, the different positions one naturally takes when lying down are favorable to the emptying of the sinuses.

When one lies on the left side, the right antrum (sinus in cheek bone) is emptied; when one lies on the right side the left antrum is emptied, and when one lies face downward the sinuses at upper and back part of the nose (level with the eyes) are emptied.

However, it has been found that in many cases operation is of no help and may leave the patient in the same condition as before operation and with some loss of smell.

Dr. Pearlman states further: "The present trend of treatment is tracing the trouble to its source and getting rid of it before the condition becomes chronic. Stress is laid on increasing the resistance of the individual and performing only slight operations to increase ventilation and drainage."

Eating less meat and table salt and eating more fruit and vegetables seems to help a number of these chronic sinus cases.

Fat Foods Important In Diet and Weight

VIRTUALLY all reducing diets emphasize the importance of cutting down on starch foods—bread, potatoes, sugar and pastry—if satisfactory reduction is to be obtained. Now starch foods give energy, help to make the fat foods burn more completely, and should be eaten in certain amounts even by those who are overweight.

What about fat in the daily diet? For the overweights who wish to lose weight, the tremendous food or fuel value of fat should never be forgotten; any quantity of fat food has twice the food value of the same quantity of either of the other main classes of foods, that is, starches and proteins (meat, eggs, fish, cereals).

Fat Foods for Underweights.

For the same reason—fat foods being rich in fuel value—underweights are advised to eat fat foods up to the point where the amount of food does not cause indigestion and spoil the appetite.

A table that should help overweights to pick out foods they like that are low in fats, and underweights to select foods they like and (which agree with them) that are rich in fats, is given by Dr. R. G. Sinclair, department of biochemistry, Queens university, Kingston, Canada, in a booklet, "Nutrition in Everyday Practice," issued by the Canadian Medical association. There are three divisions, (a) foods low in fat, (b) foods containing a medium amount of fat, (c) foods rich in fat.

Foods low in fat: Less than 2 per cent of fat: vegetables, most fruits, cereals, bread, egg whites and buttermilk.

Foods with medium amount of fat—2 to 10 per cent—cream soups, milk, veal, chicken, turkey, lean beef, crab meat.

Foods rich in fats—about 10 per cent—butter, and other fats and oils, salmon, tuna, lamb, pork, duck, goose, egg yolk.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Can worms lower the vitality?
A.—Yes.

Q.—Please suggest foods with their individual vitamin content which are essential to any good diet.

A.—If you use a daily diet containing one part meat, eggs or fish; two parts fat foods—butter, cream, egg yolks, fat meats, and four parts starches—bread, potatoes, fruits and green vegetables, you will get the necessary vitamins and minerals.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by
CARTER FIELD

Carter Field says that criticism of the President for the unpreparedness of the country is unfair... Rubber from Brazil becomes a lively topic of interest in official circles.
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—President Roosevelt is being vigorously attacked in many quarters for the unprepared condition of national defense of the United States. Some of this criticism is fair, and some of it is not; but it is astonishing to anyone who has watched the wheels go round for years that so little of it is accurate.

The real criticism of the President—criticism which might be just, though some would certainly have to make it with their tongues in their cheeks—is that he did not start alarming the country about the condition of our army and navy at least four years ago.

The point is that, up until the Nazis demonstrated that bravery is of no avail against superior weapons, it is highly doubtful if any President could have obtained larger appropriations for national defense than Roosevelt did.

In the first place, despite our supposedly efficient intelligence service, he would have found a good many generals and admirals opposing certain modernization plans which are now essential.

So that, had the President chosen to go to the country with the idea of scaring our citizens into stirring up congress to huge national defense appropriations, he would not have had a united front with which to oppose the pacifists plus the little army and navy men.

CAME DISILLUSIONMENT

It must be remembered that up until the invasion of Denmark and Norway there was a very large element, not only through the country, but in congress, which believed that any nation that desired to do so could preserve its neutrality, and that it did not need an efficient national defense for that purpose.

As for the generals and admirals, who, people are saying, should have warned congress and the country, there are plenty of answers. In the first place, some of them did. But do you remember what happened to General William Mitchell? He found that just saying the things he believed—and which have since been to a large degree justified, was not enough. He had to say more than he believed in order to shock the country, as he saw it, into a realization of the necessities of the situation.

That was why he used the word "treason" in his attacks on the senior officers he regarded as responsible. Everybody knew the men he attacked were not guilty of treason, and there was not much sympathy for him when he was court martialed.

Roosevelt might easily have flopped had he tried to scare the country four years ago, three years ago, or even two months ago!

RUBBER, LIVELY TOPIC

Rubber from Brazil has become a much livelier topic of interest in the administration since the possibility not only that the allies might lose the war, but that the Dutch East Indies might eventually fall into other hands.

Of course, after the war is over, this country could always buy rubber from the islands which are now the Dutch East Indies. Even if they belong to Germany, or for that matter Japan—though Cordell Hull has certainly put his foot down on any change in their national status. But as officials here contemplate the various possibilities of a world with no British empire, and particularly a world with no friendly British fleet, the possibilities change considerably.

There would be no assurance in any future war that this country could maintain trade routes to the Dutch East Indies, even if it had its own shipping. It is still the notion, despite various alarmist predictions as to what the Nazis would do in South America, that this country could depend on a supply of rubber or anything else it might wish to buy from Brazil.

This view is held notwithstanding the fact that there are more rumors about a Nazi inspired revolution in Brazil than any other country included in the Pan American Union.

But that is only one side of the picture. The other has been growing in importance since the war in Europe cut off German exports to South America. British and French exporters are able to sell South America all they can produce, but our exporters, while the South Americans are eager to buy, find difficulty in getting payment.

The answer, of course, is that, outside of coffee from Brazil, and a few other things, this country does not want to buy many South American products.

Firestone Develops New Type of Traction Tire

Through the development of a new wide base rim and a dual purpose tire bead design, the basic shape of pneumatic tires for farm tractors has undergone a revolutionary change to give regular size tires many of the advantages of oversize tire equipment without extra cost, according to an announcement by The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company. With the new dual purpose bead construction, a standard size tire is equally adaptable for mounting on either the old narrow base rim or the new wide base rim.

When the wide base rim is utilized, the tire is changed from its customary circular shape to an open "U" shape. This greatly increases the cross section of the tire, adds to the air space and contributes to greater flotation in extremely wet and muddy operating conditions or in loose, sandy soil.—Adv.

ORLAND PARK

MILDRED WAGNER A JUNE BRIDE

A pretty but simple wedding took place Saturday afternoon at 4 p. m., at St. Michael's Rectory at Orland Park when Miss Mildred Wagner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wagner, became the bride of Roy Sandberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Sandberg. Rev. James L. Rooney performed the ceremony.

The bride was lovely in a powder blue lace dress with matching accessories and carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

Miss Lucille Wagner served her sister as maid of honor. She was attired in a dusty pink lace dress with white accessories and carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

George Hoaglund attended his cousin as best man.

At 6 p. m., a buffet supper was served at the home of the bride to about fifty relatives at a table centered with a large wedding cake and fresh cut flowers also added to the attractiveness of the table.

After a short honeymoon the happy young couple will reside in Homer.

Mr. and Mrs. Sandberg are both very popular young people and are extended best wishes for a life complete with every happiness.

TO HOLD OPEN HOUSE

Open house will be held from 7 to 12 o'clock June 16 at Goodings Grove hall in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Smith of Orland Park, who will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary on that day. They were married June 16, 1890 at Lockport.

Mrs. Smith was the former Miss Maria Wagner of Homer and is 71 years old. Mr. Smith is 74 years old. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are at present residing on the farm where Mr. Smith was born in Orland township.

Williams of Troy, Wis., Mrs. Edward Kopp of Villa Park, Mrs. John Tsch of Maywood and Miss Marie Smith of Orland Park.

Mrs. George Yunker who has been ill, is able to be out again.

In the absence of Rev. Mr. Nye, pastor of the local Methodist church, Mrs. Manly Mumford of Mokena, formerly of Orland Park, preached here last Sunday morning.

On June 18th the annual Royal Neighbor picnic will be held in the Forest Preserve on 143rd street. The picnic will be held in the afternoon and will be for the Royal Neighbor members and their children and for the Juvenile R. N. A. and their parents.

Will County Herds Make High Record

DON SWINFORD, TESTER

The advancement of the herd of cattle owned by Mrs. Louis Ebert and sons from the lower half of the association to very near the top for production is something for other dairymen to aim for.

Their first year D.H.I.A. work showed that their herd averaged 271 lb. butterfat from 19 cows. The next year in 1939, after a year of culling, careful feeding and good management found the herd with an average of 306.6 lb. butterfat. The 1940 result shows this year they have an average of 373 lb. butterfat. This shows a 102 lb. increase in production during three years of Dairy Herd Improvement Testing.

This herd is leading the association at the present; an average production of 1303 lb. of milk 44.8 lb. butterfat from 16 P.B. and G.H. cows.

When this production was reached the boys were asked how this production compared with former years. They said, "We never have made so much milk from so few cows".

Other high herds were Mrs. Geo. Mark and Sons with an average production of 1079 lb. Milk 38.0 lb. fat from 12 cows with 1 dry. Louis Holm with 1000 lb. milk 34.1 lb. fat from 19 R.H. and 2 dry. Louis Lauffer with 887 lb. milk 23 lb. fat from 14 R.H. and none dry.

A. C. Geuther with 985 lb. milk 33.7 lb. fat from 22 P.B. and G.H. cows and none dry. Wm. Bernard with 924 lb. milk 30.6 lb. fat from 13 R.H. and 1 dry and Frank Sayers with 995 lb. milk 30.2 lb. fat from 9 registered Holsteins and none dry.

Herman Barlewort received high honors of high individual cow when one of his four year old R. H. cows produced 1668 lbs. milk with a 4.2 test to make 70.1 lbs. butter fat for the month.

Julius Sewing had the second high cow with 1367 lbs. milk and 64.3 lbs. fat; Louis Holm's high cow produced 1923 lbs. milk and 63.5 lbs. fat; Mrs. Ebert's high cow produced 1668 lbs. milk and 68.4 lbs. fat. T. F. Ellison's high cow produced 1631 pounds milk, 66.9 lbs. fat and Mrs. George Mark and Sons high cow produced 1600 lbs. milk and 57.6 lbs. butterfat.

The Association average of the 19 herds was 812 lbs. milk and 28.3 lbs. butterfat.

Tung Oil Transactions

Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes today sent out letters to all state's attorneys calling their attention to the fact that tung oil transactions fall within the purview of the Illinois Securities Act and should be supervised accordingly.

Secretary Hughes stated that "essentially all plans of operation in tung oil development projects studied thus far contemplate the conveyance of title to unimproved real estate by deed to the individual investor, with a lease back to the vendor company at a stipulated rental, together with an improvement and development agreement. Proceeds from the sale of crops harvested and sold accrue to both the investor and vendor-company."

Secretary Hughes urged the investing public to avail itself of the protection afforded it by the Securities Act and inquire closely into any contemplated tung oil transactions and be assured that they are in accord with the provisions of the law.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Sacrament" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 14.

The Golden Text was, "The hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him" (John 4:23).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take, eat: this is my body. And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks he gave it to them: and they all drank of it. And he said unto them, This is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many" (Mark 14:22-24).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Are all who eat bread and drink wine in memory of Jesus willing truly to drink his cup, take his cross, and leave all for the Christ-principle? If all who seek his commemoration through material symbols will take up the cross, heal the sick, cast out evils, and preach Christ, or Truth, to the poor,—the receptive thought,—they will bring in the millennium" (pp. 23, 24).

Livestock Report

Following last week's cattle run, which was the largest in six months, supplies early this week were moderate and prices regained all of last week's net loss. A weakened pork trade kept hog quotations under pressure, while fat lambs evidenced a weak undertone, anticipation of increased runs of early Idahos, first of the season being on hand this week being the depressing influence. Stock cattle continued active sale, with calves selling from $10.50 and $11.50 and yearling stockers from $8.75 and 9.75.

A strong supporting factor in the cattle trade has been the excellent demand from eastern killers, about 30 per cent of total receipts being purchased on that account. The average price of beef steers is around $9.70 or 50c per cwt. higher than a year ago. This gain in a large measure is due to the generally better finish of offerings, which is surprisingly good for his time.

Cattle and calf slaughter last month under federal inspection dropped off slightly from a year earlier, while the hog kill was 13 per cent larger and sheep two per cent more than a year ago. The aggregate production of all meat however, was substantially greater than a year ago. Beef gained through the larger numbers of better grades arriving. Fewer feeder lambs this year account for the increased amount of dressed lamb.

The quota of packing sows arriving now forms about 10 percent of the total hog run. This supply will increase as the season works along. During July and August in excess of 50 percent of the run will be made up of "grass widows." The increasing supply of sows is adding to the burdensome lard stocks, but government purchasing is tending to relieve part of this surplus.

"THE GOLDEN RULE OF TELEPHONING"

ANSWER PROMPTLY—otherwise the person calling may think you are not there and hang up, sometimes causing you to miss a very important call.

BE SLOW TO HANG UP when calling. Stay at the telephone until you get an answer, a "busy signal," or until you are reasonably sure no one will answer.

SPEAK INTO THE MOUTHPIECE with your lips about one-half inch from it. This position gives the best voice transmission and the clearest reception.

BE SURE OF THE NUMBER before you call. If you're not quite sure, look in the directory. You may save time and avoid a "wrong" number.

SPEAK DISTINCTLY and about as loud as in ordinary conversation. Your normal tone of voice conveys your message most clearly. No need to shout.

HANG UP GENTLY after making certain the other person has finished. Banging down the receiver may cause a harsh sound in the other person's ear.

DON HALL JR., Publicity Chairman
Wm. Martin Post No. 725, V. F. W.

Suddenly we are talking about the "Trojan Horse" and the "Fifth Column." "Suddenly, up and down the American continent and all across Europe, governments and private groups are galvanized into swift action against internal enemies.

The spectacle of Poland, Norway, Denmark, Belgium and Holland, cleverly undermined from within, crumbling one after another under the Nazi heel, has shocked and horrified us. Distant though we are from the battlefields, and vast though our land may be, we realize at last that the same thing could happen here—unless we protect ourselves NOW against those seeking to bring similar disaster to the United States.

The question is—how? We learned in the last war that hysterical national jitters and witch-hunts get us nowhere—and frequently victimize innocent people. We want to face this menace coolly and quietly, to act in the American spirit of reason and common sense.

In that spirit, we offer a picture of a member of the fifth column. By these things you shall know him:

He says that democracy is decadent, outworn, doomed, that nations must be ruled by brute force because "only force is respected today."

He sneers at our national leaders of all parties, and demands a "Strong Man" who will solve all our problems overnight.

He preaches of race superiority, and the "inevitable leadership" of a master "race."

He glibly spreads anti-Semitic propaganda one day, and anti-Catholic propaganda the next, hoping, as President Roosevelt pointed out, "to create confusion of counsel, public indecision, political paralysis and eventually a state of panic."

He boasts of the "harmony" that exists under dictatorships, forgetting to mention that this is not the harmony of a nation of free men—but of a nation of serfs.

He plays on every hidden fear in order to add recruits to his ranks—ranks which pledge allegiance, not to the American flag, but to a foreign banner.

In knowledge there is strength. Cohorts of the fifth column may be found anywhere, in high places as well as among humble men and women. Once recognized and exposed—their power is lost.

The Mokena Band Parents Association met Tuesday night to make plans for the annual band picnic to be held June 30th.

During a heavy thunderstorm Monday noon, lightning struck one of the oldest trees in town standing in front of the old Stellwagen place next door to the Cooper & Hostert garage on Front street. Bits of bark was torn down the entire tree trunk. When the bolt struck the garage was enveloped in a blue sheet of flame, but luckily no damage was done at the garage.

At the recent meeting of the village board complaint was made that boys had been shooting air rifles in the village and that a stray shot had hit Miss Nora Groth, but the latter denies any knowledge of being hit.

The Women's Athletic club will hold its first meeting of the season next Thursday night, June 20 at 7:15 p.m., at Hayden's Field.

All new members are asked to come out to this meeting.

The Weber family who have been living here in the Howard Beagley house on Front street for many years, moved to Lincoln Estates Wednesday.

A News Commentator's View

By THE OFFICE BOY

Well, Sir, all the news-writers in the better papers all over the country are writing of war news. So as long as the boss said I could write a column, I might as well take the part of a REAL News-writer. Or maybe you could call me one of those commentators . . . you know . . . the ones who not only write but also digest the news . . . like a Billy goat.

I see that recently Hitler had a birthday, and what did the folks all give him? nothing but old iron. Well if Bismark was called the "iron king," I wonder if we can call Hitler the "scrap-iron" Dictator. Anyway, we can say the Germans have finally found a solution to the safety-razor blade problem!!

Well, I guess this column is getting too long, so I will close with this thought: Remember when the English boats left Denmark? Well they took all the exports they could. But some how or other they heard Hitler's ominous cough and left in a hurry, leaving something like 200,000 dozen of Danish eggs on the pier. Now I wonder if we can say for sure: "There's something rotten in Denmark."

Admiral Taussig Who Predicted War With Japan Has Long Standing Feud With F. D.

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON. — At Annapolis, where midshipmen put plebs through a constant cross-fire of hazing, one of the stock questions fired at a youngster is:

"Mr. Jones, what did Admiral Taussig say?"

And the first-year man clicks his heels and snaps back the traditional Annapolis answer: "Sir, we are now ready!"

This refers not to Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig's recent and startling prediction that war between the United States and Japan was inevitable, but to a statement he made to the British during the World War which has become a naval classic.

This gives one sidelight on the man who astounded the American public with his frankness in predicting war with Japan.

That prediction has now been discussed and editorialized from coast to coast and from beer-hall to parlor. But there are several backstage factors which have not been discussed except in hush-hush groups of naval officers when they get together.

One item is that no love has been lost between the President and Admiral Taussig.

Roosevelt-Taussig Row.

Admiral Taussig's row with the President goes back to 1915, when several naval officers, particularly the late Admiral Sims, were critical of Josephus Daniels and of Assistant Secretary Roosevelt in their preparation for war.

Taussig was then chief of enlisted personnel in the bureau of navigation and joined in this criticism. After

'OH, SAY, CAN YOU SEE?'

—Do You Know the National Anthem?—

By BYRON BYRD

It isn't a moment too soon to begin thinking about the Fourth of July. In fact it wouldn't hurt to think a little bit about Labor day.

One good reason for an early start is the "Star-Spangled Banner." With the world in the shape it's in it behooves us to approach our national anthem with at least a modicum of familiarity. Most often we attack Mr. Key's poem as though it possessed but five words. We begin resolutely with "Oh say can you see?" and then never complete the question. See what? Our only reply is a mumble. And as for the melody we are downright anarchistic. We mouth along in our own independent fashion, throwing in a note here, tossing in another there, until finally the anthem begins to take on the appearance of Fort McHenry after the British fleet finished its bombardment. The "Star-Spangled Banner" is a god song if you can sing it. By beginning our practice now we should be able to sing it by Independence day.

And while we're about it, it wouldn't do any harm to brush up on "My Country 'Tis of Thee." So many Americans now go to Canada for winter sports and fishing that a disturbing minority of our good citizens end up "My Country 'Tis of Thee" with "God Save the King."

Now as friendly as are the relations existing between England and America and as much as the American people wish Mr. and Mrs. George VI a long, happy and distinguished career, the fact remains that terminating "My Country 'Tis of Thee" with "God Save the King" is anachronism. A case could be made for it being metachronism also, but being anachronism is bad enough and should be sufficient to bring about a speedy end to the whole business.

Other Good Reasons.

There are other reasons for thinking about the Fourth of July early. For one thing, there is no discipline, no efficient preparation. Our children aren't certain if the Fourth of July is in commemoration of the Whiskey Rebellion or of the charge up San Juan hill; and we elders, on the other hand, are utterly helpless when one of the youngsters asks why James Buchanan was chosen to deliver the message to Garcia, or who helped the Green Mountain Boys take the Louisiana Purchase from the Indians. A touch of American history, therefore, would not be amiss between now and Independence day.

Then there is the picnic. Typical of American fiddle-braininess, we find that in our hurry we packed our basket with one small bottle of ketchup, one jar of dry mustard, one diaper, a tangerine, 300 paper napkins, 4½ pounds of potato chips, and a box of paper clips.

As for the beverage we discover that the babbling brook which looked so inviting from the road is little more than a drainage system of a nearby farmyard, and since we neglected to bring a supply of typhoid antitoxin we face an afternoon of steaming coffee although the heat is driving the mercury through the rivets of the thermometer and the humidity is causing the cuffs of our trousers to roll up like rugs.

Beware the Firecracker.

There is still another phase of an American picnic that is especially exasperating. That is the matter of athletic equipment. Whenever we select a fire-shaded spot along the rocky shore of a mountain lake we find we have packed our tennis racket, catcher's mask and hockey stick. On the other hand when our choice is a small grove beside a thistle-dappled field we lift the lid of the rumble seat to discover that a last-minute impulse caused us to pack our outboard motor and a take-apart billiard cue we bought one time for no accountable reason in a boardwalk auction house in Atlantic City.

America, someone has said, is the home of the free and the land of the brave. This is a good point. But too often many young Americans take advantage of their freedom to exploit their bravery. This is distressingly true during the firecracker season when our children celebrate the Fourth of July—that is, from May 1 until October 31. The least our public officials could do is pass a law prohibiting children under nine months of age from purchasing and setting off fireworks unless accompanied by a Saint Bernard dog equipped with a fire extinguisher.

Aside from the fact that generation after generation is growing up with only three fingers to a hand and only one ear to a head, the setting off of fireworks by children too young to walk constitutes a fire hazard. It is easier than one imagines for a baby's burning dress to ignite the curtains.

The foregoing are examples of what occurs when we permit a holiday to catch us unawares like an overdrawn checking account. Let's not put off thinking about the Fourth of July another moment.

Agricultural Areas Lag

The map, accompanying the June Bulletin of American business conditions issued by La Salle Extension, showing the high spots of activity in the U. S. in the past month indicates the industrial regions continue ahead of the agricultural.

Volume of Trade Six Per Cent Higher Than One Year Ago

By L. G. ELLIOTT
President, LaSalle Extension University

CHICAGO.—Even the added uncertainties created by the intensification of the war have not interrupted the slowly rising trend in many lines. The major disturbances have been most striking in the financial and commodity markets rather than in trade and industry.

The lead in an upward trend has been taken by the steel industry. The rate of operations rose from 60 per cent of capacity to over 70 per cent. A year ago the rate was 45 per cent. Activity in other basic lines, such as the machine-tool industry, have reached a new peak at 93 per cent of capacity. Automobile production so far this year has been the second highest on record, and not far below the peak in 1929.

New orders for many types of industrial goods have been increasing and inventories are lower than they were a month ago. Consumer buying has been maintained at about 60 per cent above last year at this time.

Securities Decline.

The decline in prices of securities and of many commodities was sharp and in a short time carried the price level back to the low point of a year ago. The drop was most marked in agricultural products and has thus reduced farm purchasing power. Changes were much less in prices of industrial commodities.

In estimating the future trend of business, allowances must be made for unexpected or sharp changes in the European war which might greatly modify the current trend.

War Costs

Cost in human life in the present war is less so far than in a comparable period in the last World War.

German figures are not available. The London Economist estimates it at $14,000,000,000 to $16,000,000,000.

Sweden, neutral more than 100 years, spent $200,000,000 last year for war preparedness as against $45,000,000 in 1936.

Springtime Is Season of Joy And Zest for Wild Creatures

With Nature in Her Gayest Mood, Animals Enjoy Their Own Games and Frolics.

SPRINGTIME in the wilds is playtime. The majority of our mammals have their young in the early months of the year, and in April and May it is possible to watch the most delightful games among the puppies of the fields.

Badger, fox and otter cubs are very playful little creatures. The otter and badger appear to have a certain amount of method in their games, but fox cubs simply romp among themselves in a wild abandon.

On a sloping sand cliff near my home seven fox cubs came out of a large hole; on the ledge just outside they played with a round stone, pushing it with their feet, tossing it in the air and allowing it to run down the slope.

When tired of this they played a game which resembled "Follow the Leader." One would run forward, dodge and leap over all kinds of imaginary obstacles, and the others would follow in its tracks; then all would roll together in a rough and tumble, in which their small teeth would tug at the fur of their companions.

Bouncing Badgers.

Young badgers are among the most amusing cubs to watch at play. With their bold black and white markings they are quaint-looking little creatures, and rather clumsy, but there is no doubt that they thoroughly enjoy life, and their play is exuberant and strenuous.

First they poke their noses in the ground, searching for hidden grubs; then, without any warning, all stiffen their fur, making it stand upright, and now they look twice their size. With their short legs also stiffened they bounce round one another like footballs, then leap in, grip a mouthful of fur, and roll over and over. They break apart, and again play the bouncing game, and just as suddenly as they started to play they cease, and the next moment all are diligently searching for more food.

Fun in the Water.

Many young otters are born at an awkward time, that is at the beginning of winter, but they are hardy little creatures and appear to be able to stand any amount of cold. Otters, more than any other wild creatures, show us that they thoroughly enjoy life; a plentiful supply of food makes them contented, and both parents and young play the most delightful games.

What appeared to be a large brown ball was floating gently down stream, hardly making a ripple as it swept along. Suddenly the ball seemed to burst open with a loud splash, and four excited otters with their bright, eager eyes well above the water, started swimming round one another. One leaped right out of the stream and over its companions to dive on the other side, and as they floated along this acrobat made circles around them, those below trying to grip it as it passed over. Then they all joined up again, and seemed to be having a struggle as to which could pull the others under the surface, a sort of spirited ducking game.

They continue to play until all are tired. Then the parents lead their young off to a well-hidden lair, where they all sleep until hunger and high spirits call again. —Oliver G. Pike in London Tit-Bits.

er the war he even testified before a congressional investigation committee that the navy department heads had failed "to take adequate steps to provide personnel necessary for the proper conduct of the navy during the war."

This was in 1920, just as the Republicans were trying to dig up political dirt to be used in the Harding campaign, in which Roosevelt ran as Democratic candidate for vice president. Naturally Roosevelt resented Taussig's playing into the hands of the opposition, and wrote a sharp letter to the senate naval affairs committee denying the charges.

Thirteen years later, when Roosevelt became President, Taussig had just been appointed assistant chief of naval operations, a most important post. And he went to the new President and suggested that Roosevelt might want to transfer him in view of their previous difficulties. The President, however, told him to forget it and continue in his new job.

Brilliant Career.

It is no exaggeration to say that Taussig's career is one of the most brilliant in the navy. His father, Edward David Taussig of the distinguished Jewish St. Louis family, was a rear admiral before him.

Rear Admiral Joseph Knefler Taussig was born in Dresden, Germany, in 1877 while his father was on duty. Since then he has become the star scholar and strategist of the navy. Twice he has won the Institute of Naval Affairs gold medal. Eleven times he has been decorated for bravery in action. His specialty has been studying the Far East.

Taussig came up for assignment to new duties in 1936; therefore it was expected that he would be made commander of the United States fleet. However, in a conference between the President and his highest naval advisers, doubt was cast on the wisdom of having a man of German Jewish descent no matter how brilliant his record, head the United States fleet at a time when religious and racial prejudice had been made such an international issue.

Heads Scouting Fleet.

So Admiral Taussig was appointed commander of the scouting fleet. And after three years in this position, suddenly he was given the relatively unimportant job of commanding the fifth naval district at Norfolk, Va. This was a definite comedown.

Whether Admiral Taussig resented this shelving is his secret. Being human, probably he did. Whether he let it get the better of him when he blasted at Japan before the senate committee never may be known.

The Bengali backed away from Norwood. He looked three shades paler. He was trembling. The Maharajah's right hand seized the drumstick of the golden gong. He raised it.

"No," said Norwood. "Not yet, please, Your Highness."

The Maharajah stared. He seemed uncertain whether to feel flattered or offended. He laid down the drumstick and resumed the tapping on the desk with his fingernails:

"I become nervous," he said, "without my tonic. This is very bad for my nerves. Captain Norwood, how did you know about this?"

Norwood answered without looking at him. He was watching the Bengali and the white-clad servant:

"I didn't know. I guessed it. Both of you, go and stand over in that corner, with your backs to the wall!"

The servant obeyed promptly. He went down on his knees in the corner. He put his hands together and held them in front of his face. The Bengali backed away slowly, watching Norwood's eyes. He backed until he reached a bookcase. Suddenly he snatched a stamp album and hurled it at the goblet. Norwood caught the album in his right hand, by one leaf of the cover. He set the goblet on the desk, without spilling more than two or three drops. Then he closed the album carefully and gave it to the Maharajah. The Maharajah petted it, stroked it:

"My collection of Cape of Good Hopes! My triangular black!" He glared at the Bengali. "You vandall! Now I know you are guilty! Why did you throw it?"

The Bengali had recovered some of his presence of mind: "It was at him I threw it. By his touch he has defiled your drinking goblet! He is a bribe-taker! I suspect him of having tampered with your tonic. What has he put into it? I advise Your Highness not to taste it!"

The door behind the screen opened, closed again, and the Maharanee appeared. Norwood bowed to her, but she took no notice of him. She went straight to the Maharajah, knelt beside his chair, and whispered. He grumbled at her, sotto voce. She continued whispering. At last he nodded. She stroked his right hand, murmured traditional phrases of respect and left the room. She didn't even glance at the Bengali.

"I need my tonic," said the Maharajah. "I am becoming more nervous each minute."

"Whiskey and soda should be a good prescription for that," said Norwood. "I'd have brought a flash if I had any sense. I didn't think of it."

"I have never defiled myself with whiskey," said the Maharajah. Norwood kept his eye on the Bengali: "If you had never drunk anything worse than a scotch and soda, they wouldn't be betting in Kadur bazaar that you'll be dead by midnight. Any money on it, doctor? What odds did you get?"

The door behind the screen opened again. The Maharanee reappeared, veiled. She was followed by Lynn, and then Rundhia. Rundhia looked startled. He shot one penetrating glance at the Bengali, then at Norwood, then at the Maharajah. He made a very obvious effort to recover self-possession.

"Captain Norwood," said the Maharanee, "why did you wish to see me?"

"About this," said Norwood. He hadn't time to reply decently. He had noticed that Rundhia was trying to signal the Bengali through the opening under the desk, so he got in the way. As soon as Rundhia had stood up again, Norwood spoke:

"Rundhia, here's something for your bruised face. Come and drink it."

Lynn stared with parted lips from one man to the other. Rundhia glanced at her; he looked stung, scared, sullen. Norwood hadn't looked at Lynn once since she entered the room.

The Maharajah pointed the gong drumstick at the Bengali: "Stand still," he commanded. "If you are unable to stand, you may sit—on the floor—where you are."

"Rundhia," said Norwood, "how about a trial by ordeal? You have accused me, behind my back. I accuse you, to your face, of an attempt to poison His Highness. What do you say? Shall we share this drink together? You drink half. I'll drink what's left."

"You are the last man I would drink with," Rundhia retorted.

Norwood laughed. He thrust his right hand into his tunic. "Steady, Rundhia! Keep your hand away from your pocket. I have you covered.—Lynn! Reach into Rundhia's hip-pocket and put his pistol on the desk!"

Lynn stared—resentful, alarmed, puzzled. Parted lips. Wide blue eyes. Frowning.

Norwood repeated the order: "Lynn, do as I tell you!"

Lynn felt in his pocket. She laid an automatic on the table:

"Rundhia," she said, "I didn't think that of you."

"Rundhia!" said the Maharanee. She had unveiled her face.

Lynn spoke again: "Rundhia, you came to offer Captain Norwood something else than that, didn't you. Where is it?"

Rundhia snarled: "Tell him to put his own pistol on the desk."

"I haven't one," said Norwood. He reached for Rundhia's pistol, jerked it open and broke it.

There came a knock at the door. The Maharanee rearranged her veil. Norwood stepped aside, keeping his eyes on Rundhia, who was biting his lip. The Maharajah tapped the gong with his fingers. The door opened.

The anteroom attendant spoke rapidly in his native tongue. The Maharajah looked like a frightened sheep. He nodded, speechless. The attendant bowed in the Resident and closed the door behind him. Norwood, still holding the goblet in his left hand, reopened the door and jerked his head at the Bengali:

"Get out!" he commanded.

The Resident stared. He almost forgot to bow to the Maharajah. He watched the Bengali leave the room. Then he looked at Norwood again and raised his eyebrows.

Norwood spoke sotto voce: "Did my man follow you?"

"Yes," said the Resident.

"All right then. The doctor won't get far."

"You surprise us," said the Maharajah. "We are overburdened with joy by this visit. But what does it mean?"

The Resident looked comfortless: "I am at a loss for an answer! Captain Norwood sent me a sort of SOS. He—"

"May I speak?" asked Norwood.

The Resident answered: "I think you'd better, if His Highness—"

"Yes, please," said the Maharajah.

"Rundhia," said Norwood. He held up the blue goblet in his left hand, almost as if he were going to drink a toast: "Let's hear your accusation. What have you against me?"

Rundhia eyed him sullenly: "Nothing," he answered. "I don't know you."

Norwood smiled: "Very cautious of you, Rundhia. I am really alive."

The Resident also smiled. He startled everyone by saying:

"Rundhia, there is a conversation on record. Of course, only my version of it. But I refused, you remember, to treat it as confidential. I made a memorandum of it."

Rundhia swallowed what was left of his dignity. He was looking beaten. He spoke as if the insolence had all oozed out of him:

"I forget what I said. I withdrew it anyhow. I have already written this."

He groped in his inside pocket, avoiding Lynn's eyes, although Lynn looked sympathetic. He produced an envelope, strode past Lynn and offered it to Norwood. Norwood waved it aside and jerked his head toward the Resident.

The Resident accepted the envelope, and bowed to the Maharajah: "You permit me?"

"By all means. I am fascinated."

Lynn was watching the Resident. He had opened the envelope. He read the letter. He passed it to Norwood:

"Is this satisfactory to you, Norwood?"

"It's entirely up to you, sir. I accept it if you do."

The Resident stepped forward and laid the letter in front of the Maharajah: "Will your Highness please read that and, if you see fit, witness it? I have a gallant officer here in need of a rebuttal of some secret accusations that might ruin his career."

The Maharajah read, stared at the Resident, stared at Rundhia, stared at Norwood, reached for his fountain pen and signed.

Rundhia recovered a bit of his insolence. "Are you satisfied?" he demanded.

"No," said Norwood. "Not yet." He reached for the goblet—raised it, sniffed it, smiled at Rundhia. Then he looked straight at Lynn.

Lynn was watching the Maharanee, but she seemed conscious of Norwood's stare. Rundhia whispered to her, but she took no notice.

"Rundhia," said Norwood, "I will ask you two questions. Answer whichever you please. What is in this goblet?"

The Maharanee pulled herself to her feet, picked up her cushion and went and knelt at the Maharajah's left hand, so that she could watch Rundhia:

"Rundhia," she said, "answer!"

Rundhia said nothing; he glared at Norwood. Lynn turned in her chair to watch Rundhia's face. Norwood spoke again:

"You don't answer the first one? Very well, here's the other: why did you sign that retraction? I didn't ask you for it. Who did?"

Rundhia was silent.

"Speak!" said the Maharanee. She had unveiled her face. She was looking at Lynn.

Rundhia glanced at Lynn. Lynn looked suddenly straight at Norwood and spoke with such constrained emotion that her voice sounded fiercely angry:

"Captain Norwood, I asked Rundhia to write that. If it isn't what you wanted, you may blame me."

Norwood's lips moved toward a smile, but he saw her embarrassment, so he checked it. He looked straight in her eyes for several seconds before he looked at Rundhia again:

"Substitute question, Rundhia! You didn't answer that one. How much did you charge for this retraction of your accusation against me?"

Rundhia had had time to consider. He sneered: "I wrote that as an act of magnanimity. Was it wasted on you?"

Norwood glanced quickly at Lynn. "No, no, Rundhia, it wasn't wasted. But tell us all what is in this goblet. I could have it analyzed. Perhaps you would prefer to consult that Bengali doctor before you answer? Question a bit awkward? Your trouble is that you can't guess how much I know, can you? Can you guess why I let the Bengali leave the room? Any chance that he betrayed you? Rather drop the question? Very well, answer the other: how much or what did you charge, and to whom, for the magnanimous retraction of your accusation against me? I insist on an answer."

Rundhia spoke sullenly: "Nothing. No one. I don't even know what you mean."

Norwood looked at Lynn. Her lips moved. He was in time to check her:

"Please say nothing! I want Rundhia to tell it—Rundhia, choose. I won't wait all night. Account for the contents of this goblet—or else answer: what promise have you exacted—from whom?"

The Maharanee spoke in a strained voice: "Answer him, Rundhia."

Rundhia was silent. Lynn stared. He avoided her eyes.

"If I should have to mention this goblet again," said Norwood, "I will ask His Highness the Maharajah to summon the guard. What promise have you exacted from whom as the price of your signing that retraction?"

"There was no price."

The Maharanee was looking at Lynn. She spoke suddenly: "Run-dhia, speak like a man! There was a promise!"

Rundhia stared at his feet. He had the grace to speak as if he were ashamed. He almost mumbled: "I release her from the promise."

Norwood looked at Lynn steadily: "Do you accept that?"

"No I refuse. Is this your vengeance? It's cruel. Doesn't the retraction satisfy you?"

Norwood smiled at Lynn and made a reassuring gesture. Rundhia stared; he looked astonished. The Maharanee stood up. Norwood spoke:

"Lynn, did Rundhia tell you that I tore up your letter? He lied. Your aunt gave it to me less than an hour ago. It reached her by mistake in the wrong envelope."

"I confirm that," said the Resident.

Lynn stood up and waited for Rundhia to speak. He didn't.

"Rundhia," she said, "did you hear that?" Then, turning: "Thank you, Captain Norwood."

"Just a misunderstanding," Norwood answered. "I will explain it later."

Lynn shook her head. Her eyes met his but she made no reply. She left the room by the door behind the screen. The Maharanee followed her. Silence.

The Resident wiped his face with the handkerchief: "Steady, Norwood," he said. "Steady." He spoke aloud to the Maharajah:

"Does Your Highness wish—"

"I wish for tranquillity! I do not care to know any more!"

"Carry on!" said the Resident. "Careful!"

Norwood raised the goblet, this time in his right hand: "You don't deserve this, Rundhia. You're a blackguard." He glanced at the Resident: "You agree, sir?"

The Resident nodded. The Maharajah stared, fascinated. Norwood spilled the contents of the goblet on the floor.

The Maharajah turned to Rundhia:

"Leave the room. Never return."

Rundhia moved toward the door behind the screen, but the Resident jumped out of his chair. Rundhia began to hurry. Norwood was too quick. He shoved the screen in Rundhia's way. It banged against the door and the noise almost made the Maharajah scream.

"Your Highness," said the Resident, "in Prince Rundhia's presence, I take this opportunity to inform you that I have written to His Majesty's advisers, strongly recommending them to exercise their veto in the matter of Prince Rundhia's succession to the throne of Kadur."

"You have already written?"

"I have mailed the letter."

"I resign," said Rundhia sullenly. "You and your veto may go to the devil."

"May I speak to Your Highness alone?" asked the Resident.

The Maharajah scowled at Rundhia: "Go out that way!" He pointed to the door into the anteroom.

Rundhia walked out. Norwood followed. He overtook Rundhia at the head of the stairs, and Rundhia turned about and faced him:

"I sincerely regret," he remarked, looking straight into Norwood's eyes, "that the men who fired at you, missed."

"Yes, you had rotten luck, Rundhia. What will you do—go to Europe? The Riviera? That's crowded with might-have-beens who insisted on hitting below the belt. D'you know, Rundhia, if I had even suspected you of having put one over on Lynn Harding, I would have let you hang. You know, they hang even princes who play at your game." He laughed. "No, Rundhia, no. You will walk ahead of me down the stairs. I know that trick."

English Abbey Built 800 Years Ago Now Up for Sale

Rufford Abbey, 800-year-old English estate, is being put up for sale, London papers report. The estate contains 18,700 acres and includes the abbey, founded in the reign of King Stephen, partly rebuilt in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries and an ancient deer park of more than 500 acres.

It also includes the whole or greater part of the villages and parishes of Old Ollerton, Eakring, Wellow, Blisborne and Ompton, as well as parts of Walsby, Egmont, Edwinstowe, Farnsfield, Kirton, Blidworth and Tuxford.

The estate comprises about 70 farms, 38 small holdings, four licensed houses, including the famous Hop Pole at Ollerton, many private residences and shops, nearly 2,000 acres of woods and plantations, and hundreds of cottages.

One of the most famous estates in the dukeries, Rufford abbey never has been in the market before, and its forthcoming sale will be one of the outstanding transactions of recent years in real estate. Lands at Rufford were recorded long before Domesday, but its history as an abbey began in 1148, when Gilbert de Gaunt, Earl of Lincoln, founded an abbey there, dedicated it to the honor of the Blessed Virgin Mary and colonized it with Cistercian monks from Rievaulx abbey.

The abbey lands increased, and from the earliest times the monks enjoyed special privileges in the surrounding Forest of Sherwood. The abbots became rich enough to entertain royalty, and September 18, 1290, Rufford received the first of many subsequent royal visitors; Edward I passed a night there and sealed a variety of documents.

The rich abbey attracted the attention of Henry VIII's commissioners when he was considering the dissolution of the monasteries and in 1537 he annexed the abbey and gave it and all its lands to George, earl of Shrewsbury, with whose descendants it ever since has remained. Thus began Rufford abbey's 400-year existence as a country house.

The chapel of the abbey was the scene of the wedding in 1574 of Charles Stuart, younger brother of Darnley, and Elizabeth Cavendish.

To Cure Hay Quickly—

Handle It with the

McCORMICK-DEERING

Side Rake and Tedder

THIS two-in-one hay tool combines the best in a side delivery rake and a tedder. It forms a quick-curing windrow—turning the leaves inward to prevent shattering and the stems outward to get the quickest action from the sun and air.

The shift of a lever converts the McCormick-Deering from a side rake to a tedder. Another lever sets the teeth at the right slant for either operation.

Roller bearings assure light draft. The strong frame is well braced by a large truss beam over the reel. Gears are extra heavy. Teeth are securely fastened by special clips and bolts. We have this and other McCormick-Deering hay tools ready for delivery.
